TRIP SUITABILITY

This holiday offers a mix of sightseeing and there is a daily choice of walks. Easier walks range from 1½ to 3 miles (2 to 5km) on undulating terrain; harder walks are 4-9 miles (7 to 14½km) with up to 4,250 feet (1,291m) of descent.

ITINERARY

Day 1: San José

We transfer from the airport on a c. 20 - minute drive to our accommodation located amongst the coffee fields and at an elevation of 4,185ft. Here we have magnificent views of the Central Valley as well as Poás, Barva and Irazú volcanoes.

Day 2: La Paz Waterfall And Coffee Tour

Today we visit La Paz Waterfall Gardens, a hummingbird observation area as well as a forest trail with spectacular waterfall views. Distance: approx. 1 mile (1½km) with negligible ascent on good terrain. We'll also visit the Cinchona bird feeders and the Doka Estate for a wonderful coffee tour.

Day 3: Arenal And San Carlos Valley

Today we travel northwest to the lush San Carlos lowlands and Arenal. We stop en route in the small town of Sarchí, known for its handicrafts and art, including colourful and distinctive traditional oxcarts. We'll also visit Zarcero, a small town that is pleasantly not overrun by tourists and is home to an intriguing topiary garden and a wonderfully decorated old church.

Set in 30 acres of relaxing gardens, our hotel for the next three nights sits along the San Carlos River where we can see crocodiles, aningas and green iguanas. As in most of Costa Rica, the birdlife is wonderful, and toucans often frequent the surrounding trees. The resort is near Arenal Volcano.

Day 4: Caño Negro Wildlife Refuge And The Río Frío

We'll be doing something a little different today. We take a slow river-boat ride through the 20,000-acre Caño Negro Wildlife Refuge and the Río Frío. Close to the border with Nicaragua, it is one of Costa Rica's best reserves. Along the way we should have a good chance of spotting monkeys, caimans, turtles, sloths and butterflies as well as several bird species. We often spot the Great pPotoo, a highly camouflaged bird that pretends to be part of a branch.

Later this afternoon we have time to relax at the hotel and enjoy the facilities, or explore the local area, including the San Carlos River.

Day 5: San Carlos Lowlands And Arenal

We have several choices for exploring the area around Arenal Volcano today.

Arenal Volcano 1968 Trails: We'll explore here in the morning. Two walks lead us over old lava flows at the base of Arenal Volcano. Distance: 3 miles (5km) with negligible ascent; or a shorter option with more wildlife watching: 1½ miles (2½ km).

Arenal Hanging Bridges: This spectacular trail, which we'll visit in the afternoon, winds through and over the primary rainforest, with a system of bridges and trails allowing you to view up close the wildlife and lush forest canopy and spectacular views of the Arenal Volcano. Distance: 2 miles (3km) with 250 feet (76m) of ascent.

Day 6: To San Gerardo De Dota

As we begin our drive to the mountains we start the day visiting a gold museum in San José, which features excellent displays of pre-Columbian pottery, jade and gold artefacts.

We continue our drive to reach the highlands of Talamanca. We'll enjoy a traditional lunch in the mountains and walk into the valley where our next accommodation is located, an unspoilt location ideal for wildlife viewing, especially birds.

San Gerardo de Dota is one of the finest spots in the country to see the Resplendent Quetzal, a beautifully coloured, iridescent bird that Central American tribes revered as sacred. We may also see Dusky Nightjars, Emerald Toucanets, Acorn Woodpeckers and a great diversity of hummingbirds, such as the Lesser Violetear, White-throated Mountain gem, Talamanca Hummingbird and Scintillant Hummingbird, Costa Rica's smallest species.

Day 7: San Gerardo De Dota

During our time at the lodge, a variety of trails will be offered in the cool mountain surroundings.

Today we have two stunning walk options. We may take an 9 mile (14½km) full day trek, with 4,250 feet

(1,291m) of descent, down the Cerro de la Muerte; alternatively, we can choose a shorter trail – 2 miles (3km) with 700 feet (213m) of descent – of equivalent beauty. There are also several shorter walks around the lodge, which will be offered in the afternoon. Walk along the nearby river to spot the riverbank birdlife, such as American Dipper and the Torrent Tyrannulet, look out for the interesting Flowerpiercer and explore the small nearby village, and learn a little about its history. Distance: 1 mile (1½km) or 3 miles (5km) to also visit a waterfall.

Day 8: To Ballena De Osa

This morning, walk the Providencia Road, which traverses the high elevation of cloud forest of Los Quetzales National Park. This peaceful road affords us a great opportunity to admire the moss-laden forest and look for the famous Resplendent Quetzal. Distance: 3 miles (5km) with 450 feet (131m) of ascent.

After lunch we drive to the highest point on the Pan-American Highway – it sits at well over 10,000 feet above sea level. On a clear day you can see both the Pacific Ocean and Caribbean Sea as we traverse the spine of the continental divide.

Dropping into the San Isidro valley we make our way over the coastal mountains towards the Pacific Ocean and our accommodation. Accommodation: Cristal Ballena Resort, Ballena de Osa (3 nights).

Day 9 - 10: Marino Ballena National Park

The park offers an array of activities and has yet to be discovered by most foreign visitors, and we spend two days here exploring. The vast sandy beach is quite deserted. Tidal pools are home to colourful saltwater fish and Humpback whales court and calve in the sheltered coves offshore.

There is the opportunity to go on an optional mangrove or whale watching tour. The mangrove tour reveals endemic species of birds such as Mangrove Hummingbird and the endangered Yellow-billed Cotinga. The order of activities will depend on tide times and personal interest, and all tours are payable locally, in cash.

A variety of walks will be offered during our time in the park, or you can spend extra time on the beach – there's a great snorkelling spot accessible from here – or take advantage of the amenities at the hotel.

Day 11: To San José

For those not taking the extension, we return to Alajuela, near San José. We'll make several stops along the way including one to spot the jewel-bright Scarlet Macaws.

Day 12: Departure Day

Our adventure has sadly come to an end; we transfer to the airport for our departure flight after breakfast.

USEFUL HOLIDAY INFORMATION

Weather & Seasonality

Costa Rica experiences two seasons: wet and dry. Departures are planned for the dry season but even then, due to travelling through tropical rainforests, there may be a number of wet days, especially inland. Temperatures depend on place and altitude. San José has an average year round temperature of 22°C / 72°F. The days can be fairly hot but temperatures drop a little at night. The highlands around San Gerado de Dota in particular are cold at night.
