

7-Night Dolomites Guided Walking Holiday

Tour Style: European Centre Based

Destination: Italy

Trip code: SELCL-7

2 & 5

HOLIDAY OVERVIEW

The Dolomites in Selva is a mecca for walkers and a must see destination for all. This dramatic landscape and its profusion of flowers will not fail to impress. We meander through this fabulous network of hiking paths walking among magnificent limestone mountains, sculpted by glaciers a paradox against the delightful alpine meadows. We visit traditional mountain huts and stylish mountain cafes along the way. Selva sits within the dramatic Val Gardena valley located in the western Dolomites in the South Tyrol region of Northern Italy. Here spectacular spires and vast plateaux of pale Dolomitic limestone, the remains of atolls formed millions of years ago in an ancient sea, contrast with the rich wild lower meadows and shady woodlands. One of the nine Dolomites UNESCO World Heritage Sites, the Puez-Odle Nature Park, begins at the edge of Selva. Marmots are common on the mountain slopes, birds such as nutcrackers and alpine chough are frequently seen, and sometimes chamois can be glimpsed in the nearby Vallunga valley. The relative remoteness of these valleys helped to preserve their distinctive mountain culture. Local people still speak Ladin, a language developed alongside the Roman occupation in 15 BC. Since 1948 the province has been officially tri-lingual; this is seen most clearly on the signposts, which show the Ladin, German and Italian name for each destination. From the 17th century, woodcarving has been culturally significant to Val Gardena. Historically it was the primary economic activity of the valley and the tradition continues with local woodcarvers producing everything from religious statues to cutting edge modern artworks.
